Program Overview

The sports industry in the United States is a multibillion-dollar industry and may soon exceed a trillion dollars at the global level. There will be an increasing number of employment opportunities in the industry for well-prepared graduates who understand the legal and business factors involved in solving problems arising in the sports industry. The Sports Law and Business program at the Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law at Arizona State University is a unique program that blends sports, law, and business from a university that is top-ranked in law, business, and athletics. The program offers a Master of Sports Law and Business (MSLB), a JD or LLM concentration in sports law and business, and a concurrent JD/MSLB degree option.

The Phoenix metropolitan area is an ideal location for a sports law and business program, with its four major professional clubs – the Arizona Cardinals (NFL), the Arizona Coyotes (NHL), the Arizona Diamondbacks (MLB), and the Phoenix Suns (NBA). As a haven for sports enthusiasts located in the sunny Southwest, Phoenix also hosts major events including the Super Bowl, the College Football Playoff National Championship, and the Final Four. The area is also known for its PGA and NASCAR events. Many other teams and events make the area a wonderful learning laboratory for our hardworking students.

Unique Partnerships

ASU Law has partnered with the W. P. Carey School of Business and Sun Devil Athletics to offer the various Sports Law and Business degrees. This is the only graduate program in the United States that intentionally combines sports law, business, and athletics in an effort to prepare a generation of problem-solvers to work in the industry. This intensive 36-credit hour master's degree can be completed by a full-time student in 12 months. Students and current professionals may also participate in a two-year, part-time program.

We also offer a 30-credit hour online Master of Legal Studies in Sports Law and Business, allowing students to take courses in the sports and business areas remotely. This innovative program is for industrious students interested in working in the sports, entertainment, and related industries. Graduates are equipped to understand the regulatory, revenue, and branding forces at work in the sports industry, nationally and globally, and are prepared to solve problems arising in the industry. Students may start the program in the fall or spring term.

Sports Law and Business

Concentrations in sports law and business are also offered through the Sports Law and Business program to JD and LLM students. Students seeking the concentrations are not required or able to take all of the required courses in the MSLB curriculum; but they are permitted to select from a broad array of courses. Pursuing the concentration also requires that students participate in some form of experiential learning, either as an intern/extern or through an applied project in sports.

JD and LLM students may also have the opportunity to work on the Sports and Entertainment Law Journal. Many students publish work done as a part of their sports law and business graduate experience.

Sports Law and Business Events

Each year, the Sports Law and Business program hosts a marquee event, conference, or symposium. This provides opportunities for students to organize, meet and interact with leaders in the sports industry and faculty experts to discuss key topics, trends, and insights regarding the future of sports across the globe.

In 2015, ASU Law, the W. P. Carey School of Business, and Sun Devil Athletics hosted a conference headlined by Tony Dungy and Oliver Luck, focusing on the regulatory, revenue, and reputational facets of sports.

In 2016, ASU Law joined forces with W. P. Carey School of Business, and the Cronkite School of Journalism and Mass Communication to take on fantasy sports, public and media relations, and amateurism.

In 2017, ASU Law and the Phoenix Final Four collaborated on the "Full Court Press" conference, which brought university presidents, conference commissioners, athletic directors, and sports media professionals together to discuss the world of college basketball.

In 2018, ASU Law proudly partnered with the Global Sport Institute for a full-day summit covering everything from youth sports, to stadium technology and innovation, to esports and more.
