

J.D. Statement of Student Policies Temporary Policy Changes for Fall 2021

IV. B. “Excessive absence” is defined as unexcused absence from more than 20% of class or other instructional time. [see page 10 of the J.D. Statement of Student Policies]

New Policy:

A. CLASS RECORDING, ACCESS, AND USE

1. Automatic Recording

All classes will be automatically recorded.

2. Administration Access and Use

- a. The College of Law administration may access class recordings without notice
 - (1) in carrying out an ADA accommodation or other university requirement;
 - (2) in carrying out a College of Law accommodation for a student experiencing an extraordinary circumstance if the student has approval from the Senior Director of Academic Services and Student Life and the Associate Dean of Academic Affairs; and
 - (3) in checking that the recording system is working properly.
- b. The College of Law administration may access class recordings in investigating a complaint if it gives prior notice to the appropriate faculty member.

3. Faculty Access and Use

A faculty member may access their class recordings at any time. A faculty member may allow all students in a course access to their class recordings for an academic purpose (ex. posting on Canvas as a review), but they may not use the recordings as a substitute for class attendance.

4. Student Access and Use

- a. A student may access class recordings
 - (1) when receiving an ADA accommodation;
 - (2) when receiving a College of Law accommodation due to an extraordinary circumstance if the student has approval from the Senior Director of Academic Services and Student Life and the Associate Dean of Academic Affairs; and
 - (3) when the faculty member allows access for the whole class.
- b. A student may use class recordings for an academic purpose only.
