The Sandra Day O’Connor College of Law at Arizona State University is seeking applicants to fill the position of Lecturer OR Professor of Practice in its Sports Law & Business (SLB) program beginning in the 2018-19 academic year.

POSITION DESCRIPTION: The Lecturer/Professor of Practice will teach four to six courses per academic year (2-3 per semester), with a primary focus in any one of these areas: sports finance, economics, marketing, or analytics. The Lecturer/Professor of Practice may have the opportunity to build and teach new courses, and these courses may be tailored to the chosen candidate’s specific expertise within one of the above domains. The Lecturer/Professor of Practice will also provide student advising and is expected to participate in program meetings, events, and activities, as well as collaborate with the SLB Advisory Board.

CANDIDATE REQUIREMENTS: Applicants must hold a Master of Business Administration, Juris Doctor, or equivalent, and should have superior academic credentials and a demonstrated record of, or the potential for, excellence in both teaching and service. Prior teaching experience is advantageous but not required. The committee is also interested in candidates with significant sports business and/or sports industry work experience and relationships.

COMPENSATION: Competitive and commensurate with experience and qualifications.

ANTICIPATED STARTING DATE: August 2019

PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

The Sports Law and Business program, founded in 2014, blends sports, law, and business into a unique 36-credit graduate degree from a university top-ranked in law, business, and athletics. Students in the J.D., LL.M., and M.L.S. programs at the Sandra Day O’Connor College of Law may also obtain concentrations in sports law and business, as well as a concurrent JD/MSLB degree through the program.

The SLB program is an innovative partnership among the College of Law, the W. P. Carey School of Business, and Sun Devil Athletics, offering students a robust learning environment that blends academics with practical and real-world experiences. Strong relationships with sports organizations throughout the Phoenix Valley and the nation bolster opportunities for professional development, work experience, and creative programming.

The Sandra Day O’Connor College of Law at Arizona State University is one of the country's preeminent law schools. Ranked No. 25 nationally by U.S. News and World Report. ASU Law is a leading provider of comprehensive and personalized legal education. Graduate programs with a range of popular focus areas, study abroad experiences, externships, community service and pro bono activities, and more give students unparalleled opportunities to gain insights and practical skills needed to address legal challenges locally, nationally, and globally.

The law school prides itself on having a broad network of engaged alumni and a legal community dedicated to the success of ASU Law graduates and the legal profession. The ability to connect with the legal community was enhanced even further when ASU Law moved to the Beus Center for Law and Society in downtown Phoenix in fall 2016. Students are now steps away from the courts, government buildings, and businesses in the heart of Arizona, in the nation's sixth largest city. In 2006, the law school was renamed to honor Justice Sandra Day O’Connor, the first female to be appointed to the United States Supreme Court.
